BARA

"Bara" is interpreted to mean "to carve away until nothing unnecessary remains," akin to how a sculptor removes the extraneous parts of a stone to reveal its final form. From this perspective, creation is not just about fabricating something new, but about removing what is unnecessary to reveal the true essence of something that already exists..

'Cut off means the Creation'

Creation is not merely a physical act of making but a wise process of discerning and eliminating the unessential to expose what is fundamentally important. This deeper philosophical understanding presents creation as a discerning process that highlights the essence of life by stripping away the superfluous..
